Crime In The College

by Doug Carlson

Most students would say that Red River Community College is a relatively safe place, free of crime and vandalism, and that is a relatively accurate statement.

But, unfortunately, this was not the case on the night of December 13, 1983. Late that night, someone forced open a change machine with a crowbar in the Cave and made off with approximately $200.

Anyone familiar with the cave will know that the change machine has rear access in a small room in the centre of the Cave, that is kept locked at all times. How the person managed to first break into the room before hitting the change machine is yet unknown.

"We can't rule out the possibility of it being an inside job," said SA Business Manager Don Hillman. "Obviously the person either had a key to the room or had somehow stolen or copied one."

Change machine after crowbar attack.

"We can't rule out the possibility of it being an inside job . . ."

After emptying the rear of the machine of about two hundred dollars in bills, the person then forced open the machine from the front and removed the change.

Where was security during all this ruckus?

Right next door, according to one student.

Security Sits

Joel Matthews, a Graphic Arts student, was working on the typesetting for the Projector in the SA office next to the Cave that night. A security guard, he claims, was there with him.

"He was sitting on his rear end, watching TV," says Matthews, "and he was sitting there for hours."

"What they should have is a time-clock system for the security guards," continues Matthews, "whereby they have to punch in at specified intervals. Who knows what could happen here if they keep sitting around all night?"

There is no cause for alarm. The comet Touhecktoe will not stike our planet. Although it is likely that it will come within a hundred thousand miles of Earth, the only danger will be from eyestrain from people looking skyward to see this natural event.

WHERE'S MY PHONE BOOK?

by Denis Labossiere

Do you have a Red River Community College phone book?

The answer is probably no, unless you are the person who made off with all 5,000 copies.

In mid-December, the RRCC Students' Association printed and released five thousand copies of a nice-looking directory containing the names, addresses, and phone numbers of every student at RRCC.

It appears, however, that a certain student did not appreciate being included in the directory, for unknown reasons. That student decided to solve the problem by making off with a large portion of the books.

SA President Gary Okrusko stated that prior to printing, an announcement was made for the benefit of those who did not wish to have their names and numbers published, for whatever reasons. The individual desiring exclusion from the directory simply had to inform the SA of his or her wishes, and there would be no questions asked. That the student somehow missed the announcement is highly unlikely, according to former Communications Director Terry Phelps.

"I did everything I could to make sure people knew about their right to have their names removed. The message was run in the student handbook, the Projector, and was even up on the TV screens," said Phelps. "If the person missed it, it's his own fault."

While it is the individual's perogative to have his or her name omitted from the directory, it is not that person's right to deny others of a copy. Many hours of hard work go into compiling and laying out the directory. The phone book is paid for by the students of this college and they are entitled to see something in return.

Following Tuesday night's Student Council meeting, SA Business Manager Don Hillman stated that the SA may print up a new student directory.

"We're considering publishing another five thousand copies of the phone book, and if we do, the exclusion offer will be advertised again. But, if that joker runs off with this batch, we'll publish his or her name and phone number right on the front page of the newspaper."

WHAT TO DO WITH $10 MILLION

by Brian King

Take one dollar and pick six little numbers. Add your six numbers to those that 33 million other people have chosen and wait. If my six little numbers came up, I'd have no problem spending ten million tax-free, Loto 6/49 dollars. At least I don't think I would.

You have to start with a celebration party. Cases of Chivas Regal, Crown Royal, and Dom Perrignon should suffice to wash down the steak, lobster, and caviar. Or just Molson Malt and pizza. That takes care of the food and drink. Now the music would have to be a class act too. Originally, the Stones were my choice but they simply wouldn't cost enough. So we'll settle for a combo of Bowie followed by the Police. The victory party should cost around 2.5 million.

The other seven and a half million could pose problems for most decent, caring people. Not this guy. First I'd hire a secretary to write negative replies to all the organizations and people who wanted some of my cash. Then I'd sit down and talk to friend Joe Patriot. Joe would want me to buy a nuclear warhead or something, but I think he'd be happy with his own tank. What does a good used tank cost? We'll pay up to a million.

The remaining 6.5 million could be used to buy status symbols and shallow idealisms. First I'd need a new wardrobe. Everything would be custom made at Barney's of New York. Then I'd need a mansion and a garage full of Porsches, Jaguars and one Rolls-Royce. This rich guy would then be the epitomy of shallow rich guys all over the world. This last paragraph was especially costly so we'll allow 3.5 million to cover it.

With the exception of gifts for a few friends, that about does it. So I'm left with 2.5 million dollars. (Allowing 500,000 for gifts) But the money is only tax-free for the first year. Now I really have to get rid of the rest because there's no way I could afford to pay the taxes on what's left. I hate investing in long term deals because it's too conformist. I can't think of a single way to spend the money either. So we'll have a contest. Write up a note for the "How should Johnny Smooth waste 2.5 million dollars?" contest. Just drop your entry off at the Projector office or in the Projector's mailbox in the SA office. Next issue we'll publish the best idea.

Smoking Ban

by H.O. Ax

In accordance with the new City of Winnipeg regulations that recently came into being this last month, RRCC will be enforcing new standards and regulations in regards to smoking in the College.

As a result of the new by-law, smoking will be banned in all areas of the College except the parking lots.

This means that because students tend to gather in the halls or cafeterias, smoking is hereby banned in any lineup there.

A favorite place for the puffers has been to indulge in a quick one in the hallways while waiting for a class to begin. Again, because people gather there, smoking is banned in the hallways.

The washrooms are a similar story. Anytime there is more than one person in the washroom smoking is forbidden. That leaves only the parking lots for the nicotine freaks and so long as they do not line up in any order they are free to puff away their lives in peace.

It will be only a matter of days before the administration posts the new signs forbidding smoking in the College and approximately 2 weeks before the security police start handing out tickets for those people who dare to defy the new anti-smoking by-law.

NONE OF YOUR BUSINESS, BUT . .

by Johnny Smooth

It may be none of your business but, this time it is your business. The Students' Association is trying to get Red River students to clean up their act. They want the halls and cafeterias kept neater. And to emphasize this, they've been running an interesting reminder ad. This ad just happens to be punctuated with the catchy little phrase "If you don't do it at home, don't do it here". Now that's just fine, unless you happen to be semi-intelligent and read the implied message. Those of us who are sneaky enough will have figured out that the reverse of the ad must also be true. Namely, if you do it at home, feel free to do it here. If this is the case, why we make a few suggestions to turn the college more into a home.

First of all, let's start with the name. No one has a formal title for their house, they just call it home. So let's change Red River into on huge Frat House and we can all call it home sweet home, or my place (for short).

Secondly, all this formalilty and regulation just has to go. No one lives on a structured timetable at home. We'll let the students select the times and the places for the classes they wish to attend. We'll also let them decide how many credits each subject is worth and how many credits they need to graduate a course. Then we have to get rid of attitude marks. If you have a bad attitude at home, mom and dad still love you, and since RRCC is becoming more like home with every sentence of this column, you shouldn't be penalized for a bad attitude here either. Now about formality, there are too many administrative meetings and too much red tape. A simple note attached to a department head's door should now suffice. After all, do you fill out a form in triplicate just to tell mom that you're going to be late for dinner? Another part of formality which has to disappear is what happens in the classrooms. No more should teachers be able to address you as Mr. King or even Brian. From now on, they should call you son or dear or sweetheart. Then you will really feel like you're at home, and not do the naughty things that the SA is advertising to us to stop.

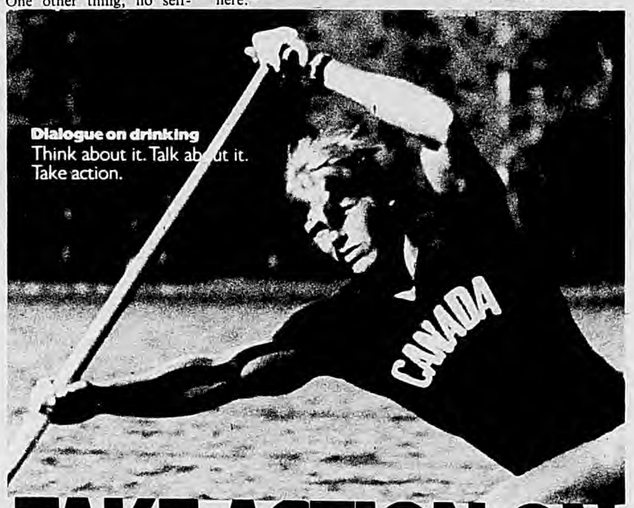
However, there are still a few things missing from our home away from home. One of the most obvious is a severe lack of refrigerators for student use. How can you feel at home, if there is no place to keep your beer cold? And yes, we must be able to drink, because the vast majority of people often do at home.

Another thing missing is an availability of comfortable furniture. When you go home do you watch television from a hard wooden bench? The reading material of the LRC has to change also. Fire all those government files down the incinerator and replace them with things that students want to read. A few suggestions are The National Enquirer, National Lampoon, Playboy, etc. Yes, these are already for sale in the Crazy Ox, but do you pay to read them at home?

While we're turning the college into a home, so we don't litter and such, how about adding some sleeping quarters. It could also use some better showers, a sauna, a whirlpool and a massage table. Recreational facilities already exist but could be improved.

Now that the SA has turned the college into one big, happy home, you're probably more than ready to stop messing the place up. Of course, if that happens then we'll have to fire the entire janitorial staff and replace them with french maids. Then RRCC would really seem like home.

One other thing, no self-respecting college student does more than two hours of school work at home per night. So like the SA says, "If you don't do it at home, don't do it here."



TAKE ACTION ON OVER-DRINKING.

"I like the taste of a cold beer on a hot day, but I certainly don't think you have to get the gang together with a couple of cases of beer just to celebrate the fact you've had a bit of exercise."

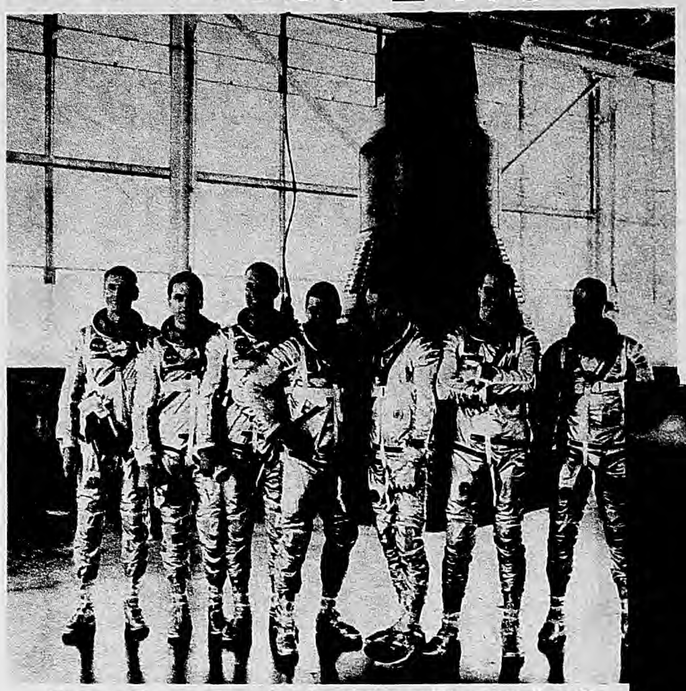
Movies: The Best and

by Doug Carlson
and Ed Matlashewski

Though 1983 was not a banner year for movies, listed below are the favourites of the year. We probably missed a few, and we don't have any foriegn films either, but we feel we have chosen wisely.

Best Movies of 1983
(No particular order)

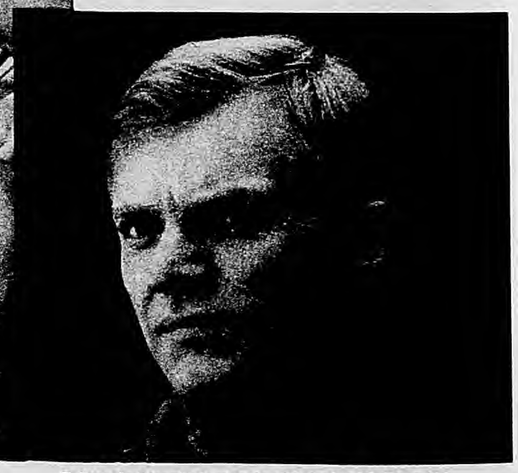
1. A Christmas Story
2. The Right Stuff
3. Dead Zone
4. The Survivors
5. Britannia Hospital
6. Bad Boys
7. Big Chill
8. Local Hero
9. Terms of Endearment
10. Risky Business



The seven Mercury astronauts before their capsule in a scene from The Right Stuff. Unfortunately, this film also appear on the Worst of the Year list because of poor special effects, pretentiousness, some witchcraft mumbo jumbo, and for being just plain too long.

Robin Williams in a scene from The Survivors, one of the few real comedies of 1983.

Kevin Kline and Glenn Close in a scene from The Big Chill, a tender reunion that brings the sixties up to date for a close group of friends.



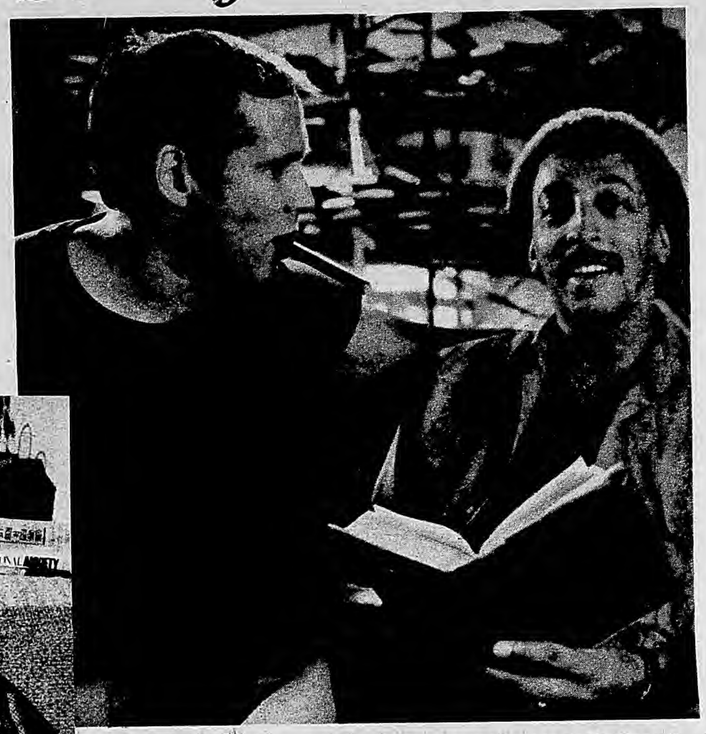
Britannia Hospital, starring Malcolm McDowell, was a must-see movie that nobody saw. It played here only a week and was by far the blackest comedy of the year.

the Worst of '83

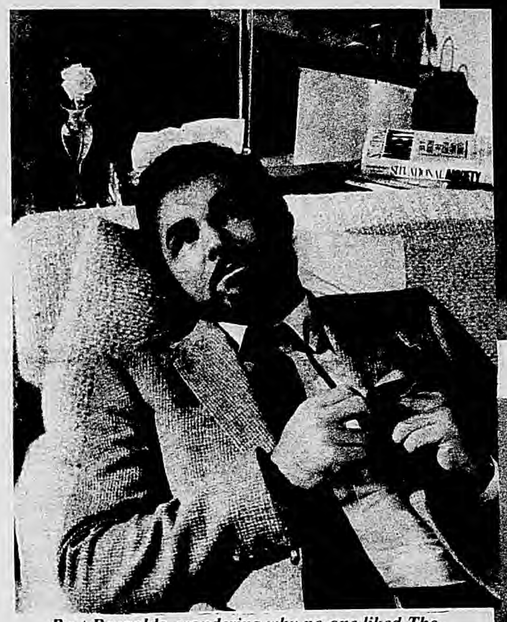
Picking the worst films of 1983 has been no picnic either. There have been so many bad movies in 1983 it is hard to choose what is actually the worst. Sexist exploitative films have been left out as have some big budget movies. Here are just a few of the dogs of 1983.

Ten Worst Movies of 1983
(No particular order)

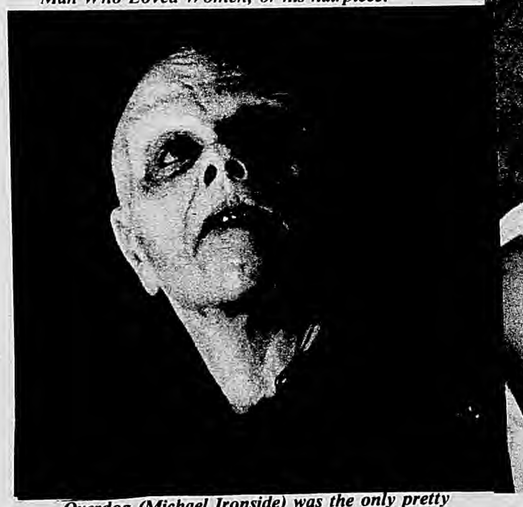
1. 2 of a Kind
2. Space Hunter
3. Man Who Loved Women
4. Deal of the Century
5. Three Worlds of Nick
6. Return of the Jedi
7. Q
8. Never Say Never Again
9. The Right Stuff
10. Scarface



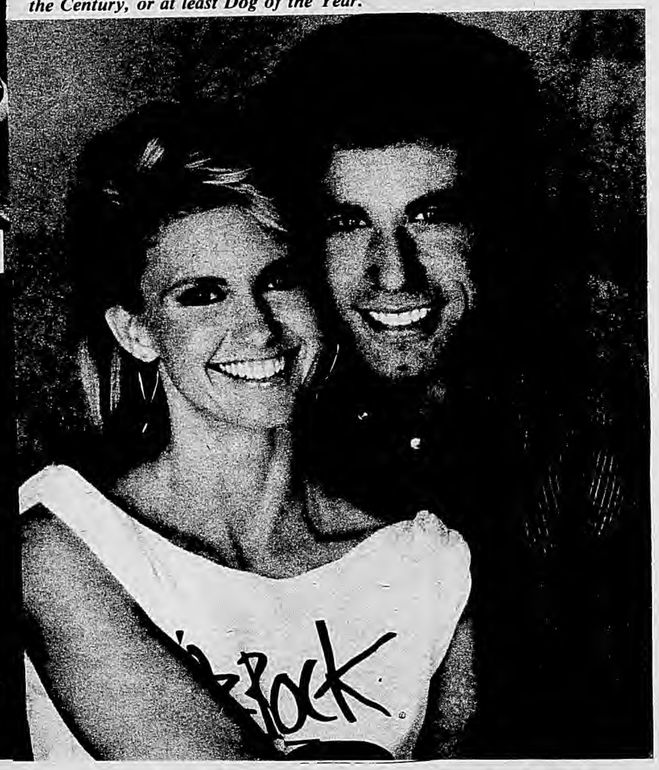
Deal of the Century, starring Chevy Chase, turned out to be the Dog of the Century, or at least Dog of the Year.



Burt Reynolds, wondering why no one liked The Man Who Loved Women, or his hairpiece.



Overdog (Michael Ironside) was the only pretty thing in Spacehunter: Adventures in the Forbidden Zone.



Sell toothpaste? Yes. Make a good movie? No. Two of a kind with Olivia Newton-John and John Travolta: Stinker of the Year.

Bartlett: Alive and Well

by Andrea Long

Rex Bartlett is alive and well and playing his music once again.

After a break of 2½ years, Bartlett has put together a new band. Recently appearing in the lounge at the Osborne Village Inn (the Plaza), the band is called the Rex Bartlett Band.

The group consists of Bartlett on electic piano and vocals, Brad Joyal on guitar and background vocals, Dave Hupp on bass and background vocals, and Reed Oslund on drums.

The 31-year old Bartlett began his musical training as a child. Forced by his parents to take piano lessons when he wanted to play baseball, he studied for five years. Bartlett started to play in various bands around Winnipeg in his teen years.

"We played mostly top-40 songs — by the Rolling Stones and Birds, groups like that. Top-40 music was excellent then," said Bartlett.

Giving up music for working at other jobs and travelling, Bartlett didn't return to it until about six years ago. Then he formed a band that played dates in Alberta and B.C., but which didn't go over very well. Back in Winnipeg, the Rex Bartlett Band made the Plaza lounge their headquarters.

"The manager believed in us. When the hotel changed hands, the new manager got us as part of the works," said Bartlett.

The group made a demotape that was played on the now defunct University of Manitoba radio station. Their main claim to fame was warming up for George Thoroughgood and the Destroyers at the Playhouse. After that the band broke up for financial reasons.

For the past 2½ years, Bartlett has been occupied with things other than music, but decided to give it another try.

SPORTS

RRCC Rebels Hockey

by Brian King

Bottineau, North Dakota is a university town. It supports the NDSU Lumberjacks to its best ability. It is also the most boring village in existence. It was to this hommlet of yawn that the Rebels ventured just before Christmas. The Rebels played well and ended up with a win and a tie.

The Rebels won the first game played on the Friday. The team executed well in every facet of the game. Red River's skating, hitting, passing and shooting was excellent. They clearly outclassed the Bottineas team. This is spite of leaving high scoring forwards Tom Bunn, Glen Nystrom, Ron Brako, Mel Biluk, Bill Treble and Leon Va n Kemenade at home. All were either injured or busy with exams. The rebels dominated the first and after one it was 3-1. Rebel goals were scored by Blair Marshall, Kevin Gillis and Keith Vann.

The second followed the pattern of the first. The hitting was sustained and the period was very entertaining. Both teams managed to score a pair of goals. The Rebels got one more from Marshall and another from Dave Korchynski. Korchynski, who played the game with the flu, had an outstanding period in both ends of the rink. At the end of two, it was Rebels 5 — Lumberiacks 3.

Jameson Spectacular

The third opened with Bottineau scoring a quick power play goal to close the gap to one. The Jacks then started to come to life and apply some pressure in the Rebel end. However, goaltender John Jameson was spectacular and stoned them. Doug Lemon got a quick break down right wing. Lemon made no mistake and tucked it in the top corner for his first goal of the year. It was the big goal and completely demoralized the Bottilneau team. The rest of the game was routine and the Rebels headed back to the motel 7-4 winners.

The three stars were:
3) Gord Stephanson
2) Blair Marshall
1) Dave Korchynski

Game 2

The Circus

The next afternoon the Rebels returned to the rink ready to play hockey. Instead, they received free admission into a circus. The entire game was one atrocity after another. The final score of 7-7 did more than flatter Bottineau, it made them look good as Christie Brinkley. The Jacks jumped out to a two goal lead and held it until 19:59 when Brent Cyr blasted on into the Bottineau net. It was a penalty filled period with little body contact and hockey. It was full of cheap shots and stickwork. I accentuated the putrid officiating. At the end of the first period, Coach Whyte felt that in the forty years he'd been involved in hockey, it was the worst, inconsistent rule calling he'd ever witnessed. Whyte never comments on the the officials.

The second period was worse than the first and so was the third. The lack of play doesn't deserve to be reported on and won't be. However, this reporter must voice his outrage on referee Don Adams. Adams is the worst referee ever to strap on skates. Continually out of position, he made bad calls. He even made penalties that he didn't see. As a case in point, consider the following: Bottineau forward, Geoffe Plouffe was skating up ice, looking behind him for a pass. Doug Lemon, who was checking Plouffe, was skating beside him. As the Bottineau defenceman passed the puck up ice to Plouffe, Adams turned back to see where the puck was. The puck hit Plouffe's stick the same time Lemon's shoulder hit Plouffe's head. Plouffe went flying across the ice and was down like a lead weight.

Questionable Calls

Adams turned around to see Plouffe lying on the ice. He gave Lemon a charging penalty. Then when Plouffe didn't move, Adams skated back to the timekeeper and changed it to a major penalty for intent to injure with a charge. Instead of congratulations for a great body check, Lemon got a match penalty and automatice one game suspension. Isn't Don Adams neat? But his incompetence does not end with penalties. The game ended in a 7-7 tie. However, Adams also managed to disallow two Rebel goals. Both times no reason was given and both times Adams was out at the blue line and not on the goal line where he should have been. This particularly infuriated me as one of these "non-goals" was scored directly under where I was standing and was clearly a goal. In the the words of Tom Watt, "We were cheated".

Rebels Show Class

The other goal scorers for Red River were Keith Vann with a pair, Dave Korchynski, Keith Klips, Gord Stephanson and Blair Marshall. Marshall's was the game tying goal. The Rebels displayed tremendous team character coming back time after time. There really weren't any stars but we'll make Marshall third star for scoring the last goal. We'll let Plouffe be second star for looking like such a jerk and we'll award first star to Gord Stephanson for totally outclassing every Bottineau checker on the ice. (And you thought Gretzky could stickhandle) It took the team only 37 minutes to get out of Bottlineau, let's hope they don't have to go back, ever.

Jack Daniel Distillery. Named a National Historic Place by the United States Government

AT THE JACK DANIEL DISTILLERY, you can taste for yourself why our whiskey is so uncommonly smooth.

Iron-free. From an underground spring.

As soon as you sip the water we use, you can tell it's something special. That's because it flows, pure and iron-free, from a limestone spring located deep under the ground. At Jack Daniel Distillery, we've used this iron-free water since our founder settled here in 1866. Once you try our whiskey, we believe, you'll know why we always will.
