S.A. Mascot Goes Wild

by Dave Haynes

Teachers at Red River Community College are having few problems keeping their students in classes these days. The students are afraid to leave the safety of the classroom. For outside, stalking hallways, is Rebel, the White Devil.

Once a playful, docile school mascot, Rebel has mysteriously gone bad, mauling students and terrifying the student population. At this writing, the death toll stands at 87. It rises daily.

No one has been able to stop the bear, but not for lack of trying. Initially, the plan was to scare him off. They showed it pictures of Tony Militano, they made it listen to Meatloaf, but it didn't work. The bear was fearless.

The Student Association, left with no other choice, has put out a contract on him. One group from Civil Tech attempted to force-feed the bear Buffalo Place soup but it backfired. The bear liked it. Then, a group of nurses lured Rebel into a locked room where they tried to giggle him to death. No luck (although he did get a date with one of them next Friday).

What happened to this once cheerful old polar bear? S.A. Activities Programmer Lynne Gurdebeke thinks it may be the result of an accidental blow on the head the bear suffered several weeks ago. Rebel failed to duck his head while entering the S.A. office and was temporarily knocked out. He recovered quickly, but it wasn't long after that when the trouble started.

The first victim was a young Secretarial Science student, Kim Millington. Sitting alone at a library cubicle, she never had a chance to stop her attacker. She was found minutes later, her body torn and her hair messy.

Kim's friends and classmates were visibly upset when they heard the news. "She owed me five bucks," sobbed one girl.

The pattern has continued. There have been 86 other attacks in the college, 86 other victims. Police have refused to step in and try to stop the carnage, insisting that the bear's just a little too frisky. Meanwhile, college security has been unable to help since most of their men are on a nationwide manhunt for a double-parker.

The situation looks bleak for Red River students. Local veternarians have studied the case and say the only way to cure the bear is to give him another blow on the head, bringing him back to normal. But the S.P.C.A., Greenpeace and Marlon Perkins have all threatened lawsuits if such vicious action is taken.

For now, students will just have to keep their eyes open for Rebel, the White Devil.

Pervertor photographer caught the White Devil taking one of his 87 victims.

College student takes "cutting" blow

by Dave Church

Winnipeg police are investigating the mysterious disappearance of a Red River Community College student last seen two weeks ago entering the meat-cutting department of the school.

Sparston Getty, 22, of no fixed address, was last seen on October 11 by his locker partner, Bernd Kacker.

"Spa Getty and I have been living together in this locker for over a month," said Kacker. "Then one day he said he was going to the barber school for a haircut. His hair was down over his eyes, and I guess he went into the butcher shop by mistake. He never came back."

Police Detective Hiram Clooless admitted that police have only circumstantial evidence regarding Getty's fate. "The meatcutting department records show that sausage output was about 120 lbs. higher than expected for October. However, we can't prove anything because the sausage was served at the Voyageur Cafeteria. All of the evidence has been eaten."

Detective Clooless said that anyone possessing two-week-old sausage from the Voyageur should report to him immediately. "Analysis could help us to determine if Food Services has mixed Spa Getty in with their pork."

Student Association president Tony Militano expressed little interest in the situation. "I never eat at the Voyageur anyways," he said.

Students swamp legislature

by Bob Armstrong

A group of students from Red Tape Community College has taken over the Manitoba legislative building, threatening violence unless all their demands are met.

The group, made up of Badass Administration and Conservative Commercialism students, broke into the building last night at about 11:30, disguised as vermin. Once inside, they kidnapped several top level government officials, including two cleaning women and one night watchman.

Spokesman for the group, Dave Stains, warned police not to try rescuing the hostages or "anything could happen." It is not known if any of the students are armed but several are listed as "dangerous" and "criminally insane" in their Red Tape files.

Police Chief Spiny Norman described the situation as "volatile" and said the danger is "these Red Tape students have no grasp of reality, you can't reason with them."

Mayor Beer Stein described the incident as "a whale of a kidnapping."

The students have issued a list of demands, written in crayon on used Kleenex. The demands include: longer green lights, warmer weather, Suzanne Sommers and two extra hours between two and four in the morning.

Mayor Stein said the demands are being looked at but that police will try to convince the kidnappers into giving themselves up.

Dave Stains said the students are going to stay until every one of their demands are met or "until we get tired of it."

Sports Editor Dies

A 19 year old College Student was found dead behind the Occidental Hotel early this morning.

The deceased was identified as Barry Horeczy, a second year student at Red River Community College.

Sources say the youth apparently died of asphyxiation while attempting to snort a couple of beer cans up his nose.

A funeral for the deceased will be held on Thursday. A party will be held immediately afterwards.

College Grabs Bus Rider Award

by Jan McCall

City mayor, Tidbit A. Steam, in behalf of RRCC students, received the Bus Riders of the Year Award at the 113th Annual International Pleasant Bus Riders (IPBR) convention held in Winnipeg's bus depot last week.

Each year the IPBR investigates hundreds of participants in the International Pleasant Bus Riding program. Awards are given to the individual or group that best exemplifies the IPBR's goals and objectives as stated below:

1. Get on the bus as fast as possible (push, kick, scratch, scream). It makes the driver feel loved.

2. Show you appreciate your driver. Crowd into the front of the bus and avoid the back like the plague.

3. Fight for your rights. Protect two seats while only using one.

4. Open your window wide. Give your friends(?) behind you their daily dose of fresh air.

5. All women, children and elderly should offer their seats to students who are tired from sitting in classes all day.

6. Don't aid students with an armful of books. They are in weight-training for the Olympics.

7. Keep testing the driver. Pull the bell five feet before your stop. If the driver fails to stop, report him/her. He/she is not competent.

8. As your half-full bus drives by, wave quietly at people waiting at bus stops. Their patriotism will be rewarded. Half-full buses aid the country because two buses and two drivers are required to do the work of one. We are creating jobs and alleviating unemployment.

9. Block passengers from exiting the bus. Let them get more than their money's worth.

10. Above all, do not smile or talk to anyone. The last thing we want is a noisy bus.

This year RRCC students placed first with Bangladesh Polytechnical Institute and Prairie Research Centre of Outer Mongolia receiving honorable mentions. It is the first time Winnipeg citizens have been honoured with this award but it probably won't be the last.

Pulitzer Winner

by Ken Sitter

Tony Militano, star reporter for The Pervertor, has been nominated to represent this paper at the ninety-six annual Pulitzer awards banquet.

Editor-in Chief, Susan Mihaychuk, said the nomination was only natural since he was the only staff member nominated for an award. News editor, Kathe Switzer had no comment, while managing editor Dave Haynes admitted he was jealous and would kill Militano the first chance he got.

Militano, a general interest, investigative, sports, feature, entertainment and political reporter was nominated for the sensationalist award. The award carries with it a five dollar (American) prize and a job offer from the Upper Nantucket semi-weekly Bulletin-Herald.

Militano, a two-year veteran of The Pervertor, admitted he was pleased. "I'm glad I was nominated to go to the dinner and even more gladder to be nominated for the award," he said.

Militano would not speculate on his chances to win the award, saying, "I think it would intimidate the judges if they knew Idi Amin was my bestest friend."

Trudeau held for ransom

by Pat Keelan

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, kidnapped last week, is being held rensom for $1 million.

Liberal party members recently said they would gladly pay the ransom sum, but only if the kidnappers kept Trudeau hostage.

"This is the break we've been waiting for", said a party spokesman. "We've been trying to get rid of him for five years, but he refuses to leave."

The spokesman added that if the kidnappers won't keep Trudeau permanently, the party will offer to pay them monthly installments of $50,000 for each month they hold him hostage.

"Any time he's away from us is a bonus", said the spokesman. "We can repair the state of the country to some extent before he comes back and messes it up."

Psychic

by Brian Kozak

There are five things in life that one can almost always be certain will happen: death, taxes, inflation, snow every winter and the Montreal Canadiens winning the Stanely Cup two out of every three years. I spoke to noted Winnipeg psychic Marvin Ferb the other day and came away with some predictions:

1) Pierre Elliott Trudeau will resign as Prime Minister and Winnipeg MP Stanley Knowles will cross the floor to take over the post.

2) Ed Schreyer will accept a Federal Government Energy Board position and Joe Borowski will return to lead the masses.

3) Norma Price will leave her position as Minister of Tourism and Cultural Affairs to take a job selling Tupperware.

4) Robert Steen will once again win the mayorality race in a hotly-contested battle with Archie Wood and Jean-Claude Parrot.

5) Man will land on Mars within the next twenty years and Martians will also set foot on Earth.

6) The postal workers will go on strike at least 14 times before the turn of the century. (That's a prediction?)

7) Animal House will never be shown on T.V.

Apology

The staff of the Pervertor is deeply sorry for any personal defamation bestowed on Willis Greene, 37, of 119 Dretan Street. We really didn't know that we had called him a slithering gutter creep who sleeps with a jar of moldy mayonaisse. That was not what we meant. The meaning was also misinterpreted in the statement that he enjoyed boiling dead babies. And of course we had no idea at the time that showing photographs of him with a flock of sheep would be harmful to his reputation. We deeply regret any harm this may have caused and in the future we will be much more careful about what we print. And we hope his counterfeit printing business does well.

City Update

Adonis Theatre's Days Numbered

by Ted Bezpalko

Entertainment fans were shocked today by the news that City Council would try to have the Adonis Theatre permanently shut down.

This attempt was made public following last night's raid on the theatre by undercover police posing as raincoat and contraceptive dispensers. During the raid police seized a copy of the film, "Last Tango with Donny, Marie, Two Goats and a Pig". This film was termed by police as, "bloody disgusting, downright filthy, utter perversion and gross as my mother-in-law's rhubarb pie."

When asked by police authorities how they knew what was on the film since it was not being shown the officers who made the seizure replied, "It was an inspired guess."

Joseph C. Ginsky, owner of the theatre, however saw the matter quite differently. Screaming that the mayor's initials were appropriate, he called the raid the work of the ever growing repression of the arts by government.

It was also brought out by the police officers involved in the raid that the massage parlour run by the theatre was selling more than massages. When council asked how the officers knew this, seeing, as the parlour was closed, one of the officers said, "my sister works there."

Ginsky denied that his massage parlour was engaged in any kind of elicit activity and said he would never hire the sister of any policeman because his girls must be good looking. Ginsky went on to state that the constant harrassment of his theatre was scaring all the respectable customers away from his place.

The evidence of the depravity of the theatre was presented in the form of what the Adonis Theatre's Sex Shoppe called timely gifts for Christmas. A blow-up woman with ho-ho-ho printed on her chest was presented to Mayor Bob Steen who took it home for closer examination. Other examples were the books: The Voracious Sex Life of Minnie Mouse and the Sensuality of Shirley Temple.

Student drowns in college can

by Pat Keelan

A Creative Lobotomy student drowned in a flash flood in one of the college's washrooms yesterday.

Joseph Plume, 24, was reportedly reading in the washroom's cubicle when water from a urinal began flooding the floor.

Several students waiting in line to use the facilities evacuated the room at that moment to avoid being drowned themselves.

One student said he called to Plume, telling him to get out immediately or he would drown. He said Plume replied that he would be out in a minute, after he finished reading a rather lengthy poem on the cubicle door.

But by that time it was too late. College officials estimated that the water level had risen so high Plume was unable to open the cubicle door. Soon the water was above his head, they said, and he drowned a few minutes later.

One official said Plume could have reached safety by swimming to an air vent on the washroom ceiling and escaping through it.

However, Plume was not a swimmer. He had enrolled in a water safety course at the Pan-Am Pool for this year, but classes were not to start until two weeks after the date of the drowning.

Our Pervertor action photographer was able to infiltrate a LID training section and sneak this candid photo. Here, LID members are trained to shoot tokers on sight.

LID Squad Loose In College

RRCC's own supercop security chief, Elliot Ness, has secretly trained and let loose a special squad of drug detectors, the Pervertor learned Monday.

The team is known as the LID (Limit Interesting Drugs) Squad, and will operate "undercover." Apparently, the LID squad (pictured above) has been trained by Ness personally to root out the low-life dope addicts of Red River.

In an interview Monday, Ness said, "I don't think students will be able to detect my LID squad. I taught them everything I know about travelling in cognito, so they'll mix right in. Students had better shape up!"

Ness disagrees with observers who claim the 3-piece checked business suits, pink ties, and machine guns the squad will sport will make them stand out in the student body.

Despite criticism and suggestions that the squad should wear "what students wear," Ness insists on the standard uniform he has selected.

"I won't have my boys wearing those degenerate blue jeans!" Ness exclaimed. He added that the current dope craze was probably started as a publicity stunt by Great Scott or Wranglers to sell more jeans. "Kids will buy anything when they're stoned," Ness insists. "Even beer, blue jeans, and other corrupting things."

As for the machine guns, Ness says they shouldn't be too noticeable. "The guns are necessary for dope prevention, and they are strapped to their chests underneath their vests. I don't see how anyone would notice them (the guns)."

Student Association president, Tony Minestrone, has made a stand against the squad. "I don't like the idea of those elementary school dropouts carrying machine guns. Someone might get hurt."

Ness insists that Minestrone's opposition is inconsequential. "He's only opposing me because he probably is among the worst addicts. Why else would he be scared?"

Ness added that Minestrone's habit could be confirmed by "the constant redness of his beady little eyes."

Minestrone calls this "garbage" and attributes his red eyes to lack of sleep.

"Besides," Ness asserted, "Minestrone is just a bleeding heart liberal. There's only one way to keep our kids out of trouble, and that's to shoot their drug-crazed brains right out before they land in jail!"

The systematic execution of apprehended RRCC tokers is expected to have repercussions in all aspects of Red River life.

An Admissions officer, who prefered to remain anonymous, complained that weeding out tokers in this way might lead to a closing of the school, due to a lack of remaining students.

Lynne Garberator, the Activities Director of the college, complained that socials and beer bashes may have to be cancelled. "If all the dopers are killed off, or are too afraid to come, nobody will be left to come to these events." She expressed concern that SA revenues for 1979 might drop to an all-time low if beer bashes and socials were cancelled.

A food services spokesman warned the Buffalo would close down, because "no one eats there unless they're stoned, anyway."

In the face of this criticism, Ness remains firm. He claims the support of the Lying government in his training of the LID squad.

"Premier Lying assures me that the elimination of these freaks is right in keeping with his cutback programme," Ness said yesterday. "He will have to spend less money on teachers, staff, and the cost of incarcerating these bums. Also, it is expected to eliminate most of his opposition in the next election."

A Halloween Night

by Jeff Lauzon

'Twas the night of Halloween, and all thru the streets,
Idiots were everywhere, dressed up in white sheets,
I'd turned out all lights, locked the doors with great care,
In hopes that those kids would keep out of my hair!

Well I looked in the stores and do you know what I found?
Kiss candies were selling for ten dollars per pound,
So I thought to myself, "There's simply no enjoyment!",
Of a holiday seasonal that takes half you're unemployment!

On TV some man was running around in a slip,
And was trying to get his ol' lady to strip,
Well this made me wonder of the show on the set,
So I looked at the guide; it said Carol Burnett?

When out on the street there arose such a thunder,
I sprang to the blinds and looked out full of wonder,
Two dozens of goblins and ten ton bags a'lugging,
Damn! I thought for a moment it might be a mugging.

Up at the doors banging the glass,
Was a shrieking, screeching, hysterical mass,
And I felt from the sound of each screaming curse,
That the "Halloween Spirit" had changed for the worse!

The clock it struck nine as I opened the door,
And there were more kids than I'd seen ever before,
They pushed and they shoved, but thought better to plead,
For the candy they sought in their hour of greed.

I said, "Aren't you up late this day of the week?"
A girl of six replied, "Shut up and give us our treats!"
My mouth opened wide as I stared back in shock.
Then handed each one a chocolate covered rock.

And as that noisy bunch sailed into the night,
I closed the door and turned off the light,
Christmas sure beats Halloween anytime of the year,
I thought as I opened the icebox and pulled out a beer.

A day in the life

by Chris Cariou

North Gym Equipment Manager, Al Moore, broke down and cried last week when a polar bear clad in RRCC colors and apparently drunk demanded the right to obtain a volleyball.

The bear, who claimed he was a first year Business Administration student, was later apprehended in the Buffalo Cafeteria and taken to the Assiniboine Park Zoo.

"The whole place is a joke," Moore said in an interview after the terrifying scene. "I've worked here five years — I guess it takes that long to go insane."

Moore is the night equipment manager for the much-used facility, and said that although it had been an especially bad day in the gym, the bear had no right to make it worse.

Al Moore stands by the rules: No student card, no equipment.

Witnesses to the incident said that the bear, who was transferred to RRCC from Keewatin Community College in The Pas, walked up to the equipment desk and claimed he was scheduled to play in an intramural volleyball game. Moore had apparently taken no notice of the fact that the student was a bear and when the animal could not produce a valid student ID card, an argument broke out between the two.

The condition of Moore has improved and he will be back to work on Monday, school officials announced. The bear, however, is undergoing psychiatric examination and his condition is not known. Doctors have not yet discounted the possibility that the polar bear, who referred to himself as Perry, may be back at RRCC as early as next week.

Birmingham signs Incredible Hulk

by Murray Mandryk

Reports out of Birmingham earlier today, say that the W.H.A. Bulls have come to final contract terms with their new defenceman, The Incredible Hulk. The contract is worth an estimated $450,000 a year with many additional clauses including: no cut, no trade, and no obligation to pay for damage to the dressing room when he goes through metamorphisis.

"Hulky adds aggressiveness to our team," states the Birmingham coach. Since we lost Beaton (Frankie), Durbano (Steve) and Linesman (Ken), we've been stuck with a bunch of panty-waists."

When asked about the Hulk's skating ability, the Bulls' coach replied, "What the hell does it matter if he can skate or not? It won't matter a damn bit to Bassett (Bulls' owner). He never worried about such stupid things in the past."

The 7'8", 625 lb. Hulk started his career as a result of an overdose of radiation. Ever since, he has been busting things and terrorizing and pulverizing innocent World Hockey Association forwards for the Birmingham Bulls.

"We just hope that he can always carry the same attitude into the rink," states Bulls' coach. "If he keeps this up, in a few years he could be another Dave Hutchinson or Dave Shultz or Tiger Williams. Or maybe even . . . Gordie Howe."

Unfortunately the rest of the W.H.A. doesn't share the Bulls' attitude concerning the Hulk. Outspoken Winnipeg Jet forward, Bobby Hull, who met the Hulk for the first time in the Bulls-Jets encounter last Thursday night in Birmingham, made a few controversial comments about the big defenceman.

"This is an outrage!" says Hull. "How can that criminal of a Bassett continue to sign these big, stupid, dumb fools and get away with it? Won't the League do something? I, for one, won't stand for it. I won't let that big animal intimidate me. I am going to stick to my game and totally ignore that goon . . ." (it is at this point that this paper would like to, once again, express its best wishes for a speedy recovery to Hull. He can be visited in Room 401 of the Health Sciences Centre.)

John Bassett sends regrets from Mealhaven, where he was scouting for more talent, at the time of Bobby's unfortunate accident.

In other news from Birmingham, John Bassett is currently negotiating with 5 players, including Son of Sam, Darth Vader, Leon Spinks, Ben the Bear from Grizzly Adams and Ray "The Crippler" Stevenson, from All-Star Wrestling. Rumour has it that Bassett is trying to sign Charles Manson as coach for the 1995-96 season. Manson can coach earlier if he gets out on good behaviour."

"I just want a coach who will install a winning attitude," states Bassett.

Separation hits N.H.L.

by Pat Keelan

Montreal Canadien's Vice-President Jean Beliveau announced his club's separation from the National Hockey League yesterday.

The announcement came two weeks after a team referendum, in which 75 per cent of the players voted in favour of leaving the NHL.

Beliveau said the main reason for the Canadiens' separation was the refusal of other clubs to print names on the backs of their players' sweaters in both official languages, French and English.

He added that his club was also upset by accusations from other teams that the Canadians have been illegally tampering with the league's annual draft since the early 1960's. "How dare they question our integrity!" said Beliveau. "We've only been doing that since 1972."

The 25 per cent who voted against separation, all English players, said their reason for not joining the team was one of the clauses in the White Paper on separation, which states that players must be chewed out by the coach in French only.

The Canadiens are now expected to compete in a French League with Quebec Nordiques of the WHA and St. Boniface Saints of the Manitoba Junior Hockey League, who separated from their respective leagues last week.

Russel

Bill Russell, Los Angeles Dodger's brilliant shortstop has won an award for being the most valuable player in the World Series despite the fact his team lost the title to the New York Yankees.

It is a new award, and will be called the Bill Russell Butterfingers trophy for his surehandedness in the series.

The decision to initiate the award came when writers at Sport got together to decide Buckey Dent was overall M.V.P. and decided to give Russell an award, also.

"What the hell," said one write, "he played errorless ball."

Asmundson signed

Duke Asmundson, Winnipeg Jets journeyman player for several seasons before retiring two years ago has been signed for the 1978-79 hockey season by Al McNeil, Montreal Canadiens General Manager.

McNeil, commenting from his home in downtown Montreal said that the addition of Asmundson will really give the competition something to contend with as it will give the Canadiens another superstar to complement Guy Lafleur, Steve Shutt, Ken Dryden and Larry Robinson.

Asked why Asmundson averaged only 4 goals a season while with the Jets, McNeil replied that "the Jets just didn't know how to use him. They had him in a checking role all along which meant he could't take full advantage of his blistering shot and lightning-like speed."

"Listen," he added, "The Jets fans knew how good he was and appreciated him. You could always hear the fans cheering him on with chants of, "Duke, Duke."

In the Canadien camp, the news was taken with great concern. Guy Lafleur said, "It looks like he could take my scoring title away from me this year."

Coach Bowman said, "I feel the move was made for the betterment of the team but I'd hate to see Jacques Lemaire be cut because of it."

Last reports had Lemaire, Mark Napier and Pierre Larouche hiding in Tibet.

Chess

by Pat Keelan

Another food scandal has arisen at the World Chess Championships.

Challenger Victor Korchnoi charged champion Anatoli Karpov of again receiving coded messages in his dinner. Last time it was yogourt; this time a multiple topping pizza.

Korchnoi made the accusation in yesterday's match when he was checkmated by Karpov, who seconds earlier was given a piece of pepperoni pizza by his coach.

Korchnoi said he spotted the code early in the match, but wanted to wait and see whether he had a chance to win before alerting judges of the infraction.

He said that pepperoni meant to move the queen; salami — the bishop; mushroom — the rook; bacon — the pawn and anchovies — the knight.

Experts predict that Karpov will probably resort to the old standby, alphabet soup, to receive messages in the next match.

Baseball

Pat Keelan

New York Yankee third baseman, Craig Nettles, has been suspended by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for wearing a magnetic glove during this year's World Series.

Kuhn said an inspection of Nettles' glove was made following Game 4 of the Series, in which Nettles was catching balls travelling at speeds in excess of 200 m.p.h

The inspection, requested by Los Angeles Dodger manager, Tom Lasorda, uncovered traces of a magnetic substance in the seams of Nettles' glove.

Nettles pulled off the trick by sprinkling iron filings on the ball when it was thrown around the infield after Dodger outs. This magnetically attracted the ball to his glove.

The attraction was so strong that at times it pulled Nettles off his feet toward the ball.

Nettles, in admission of the offense, said, "It was the only way we could beat the Dodgers. I was just trying to help the team."

He added that he had used the glove in the previous Series games without being suspected of the crime, but that he "went a little overboard" in Game 4, so he wasn't surprised by the request for an inspection.

Commissioner Kuhn said he allowed Nettles to play in the remaining games of the Series, using a regular glove, because he didn't want to incite a riot by Yankee fans.

Ruoff

by Pat Keelan

Winnipeg Blue Bombers' kicker, Bernie Ruoff, is in satisfactory condition at Misericordia Hospital after suffering a broken fingernail in last week's game against the Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Ruoff suffered the injury when he tripped over his shoelaces and fell while running away from a Roughrider who was trying to block him on a kickoff return.

Ruoff said he was worried about getting his glasses broken that he completely forgot about his delicate fingernails.

He added that the player who tried to block him was very rude. "Most people know that one never hits a man with glasses", he said. "But this barbarian apparently needs a course in etiquette."

Ruoff is expected to return to the Bombers for the opening game of the 1979 season.

Cossel

Howard Cossel, sports broadcaster, is in the Los Angeles County Hospital today after straining his mouth. The doctor in charge said, "He just used it too much. I warned him against it." Cossel is expected to be released in two weeks.

Spinks

Leon Spinks, former heavy weight boxing champion of the world, lost control of his car today and hit another car, the side of a building, a lamp post, two turtle doves and a partridge in a pear tree.

This accident follows on the heels of his last accident where he ran into a tree but claimed he had the right of way.

Stones RRCC Bound

by Glen Dawkins

The Rolling Stones, the famous British rock group, is coming to play at the First Annual Red River Wine and Cheese Festival to be held at the South Gym late next month, it was announced by Program Co-ordinator Lynne Gurdebeke.

The group's appearance at the festival, Gurdebeke claimed, is the result of a late-night phone call she received from a man who said he was the rock group's manager in charge of tours and said the group was interested in playing at Red River. "He told me," Gurdebeke said, "the group had some raw material they wanted to try out before hitting the really big places. The caller, who introduced himself as Tom E. Shyster, said that because of contract and other arrangement problems, the band wanted all the money "up front".

Gurdebeke was unavailable for comment on the announcement. She has been a guest of the Selkirk Mental Institution since last week because of stress and pressures caused by the week's activities. Don Hillman, S.A. Business Manager, said that while being enthusiastic about the announced appearance of the Rolling Stones, he was strangely suspicious of the deal. Maybe I'm just over-reacting but when he asked for the check of $500 sent to a post office in La Salle, Manitoba."

Tony Militano, S.A. President, commented he was only slightly surprised at the offer. "The Stones have fallen on some bad times and with this Richards' thing, they're probably having trouble getting engagements. And anyway, I don't happen to like the Stones, so I don't care."

No one else from the S.A. was available for comment since they were all out selling tickets. But Kathy Eaton did say she felt "the concert will do the college a lot of good and even if it doesn't, it wouldn't hurt my portfolio one bit."

Rocking RRCC's shaky South Gym, Mick Jagger and his Rolling Stones will be playing in the First Annual Wine and Cheese Festival. S.A. officials are expecting a big turnout especially since they will also supplying "Ever-clear" to mix with the wine.

New Double Bill "Satisfying"

by Bill Redekop

Last Tango in Red Deer, Alta. and Naked Girls Running All Over the Place, For Crying Out Loud, the double-bill now playing at the Venereal Theatre, offers some great entertainment for the viewing audience. As they left the theatre, many people said, as the lit a cigarette, that they were satisfied they had got their money's worth.

In the movie, you get to see close-ups of all the private parts you'd ever want to see, plus a story-line, sort of, and also some top notch performances by such actors as: Bruce Dern, who plays a psychotic kindergarten teacher; Wally Cox, who plays a dead person; Margeret Trudeau, who plays around; along with a host of other stars such as Anita Bryant, Mae West, Jerry Hubbard, Chesty Morgan, whats-her-name — the girl who used to play Nancy Drew — and the Three Stooges in their first attempt at a serious movie.

Last Tango is a unique departure from traditional film-making in that nobody wears cloths for practically the whole thing. Except for when they're having dinner and that one other time when Joe, played by Jerry Hubbard, has to run to the store to by mix, everything else was performed in the raw. I found that this element added to my viewing pleasure and kept my attention from being averted.

The story revolves around Trixie, who in the movie is 25, gorgeous, and hot-to-trot. And that's pretty well it for the story line. She just meets a bunch of guys and they, y'know, do whatever. Its mostly an action-type movie with not much talking or other stuff. There is some background music but I don't know who did it.

And, let's see. What else. Well, its kind of funny sometimes. Some people laughed at certain parts — I didn't — but it all depends where you're at, I guess. And I thought the camera work was as good as it usually is for most movies.

The feature film, Naked Girls, lives up to its top top billing. It is a spellbinding drama that will tug at your heart strings. It is the story of five girls who go around robbing banks in the nude. But director Martin Scorsese makes it clear that they are simply victims of corrupt society. They can't help it.

The movie tries hard to bring its point across and succeeds. It is an obvious vehicle for Scorsese to protest capital punishment. After all, who in their right mind would want to give the chair to five girls as beautiful as the ones in the movie? It seems such a waste.

The movie ends when Bruce Dern, the loony kindergarten teacher, mows down the five girls with a sub-machine gun. Dern throughout the whole movie is obsessed with tracking down the female robbers. His obsession stems from his abstainance of nudity. He hates nudity and is revolted by the human anatomy. He always wears his clothes including at the end when he goes swimming in the ocean. There may be a message here inserted by Scorsese but I'm not sure.

Overall, I thought the movie was good and I liked everything about it except for that machine gun part.

Suicide Strikes Vicious' Girlfriend

by Ted Bezpalko

The rock world was astounded today after hearing the news of the assisted suicide of Punk Rocker Sid Vicious' girlfriend.

Police found the body in an oven at her apartment in Essex stuffed in between the aspargus and the pork chops. When asked what had happened Sid said this "She said she was feeling kind of miserable and wanted me to help her end it all, she wouldn't flush herself down the loo so I helped her jam herself into the cooker."

Experts say she was browned nicely but needed salt.

Police have been inclined to press charges on Vicious but testimonies like this from his neighbours have dissuaded them. Mrs. Cornel a life-long neighbour said this, "Sidney was always a good boy and wouldn't do something like that even though he had some strange habits like pointing at the sky and shouting heil when it didn't even like like rain, let alone hail."

When asked by police why he didn't argue with his girlfriend when he knew what she was up to Vicious answered, "I never argued with her, I was a good boyfriend."

THE FIRST ANNUAL PERVERTOR OPINION POLL

by Dave Haynes

Please read each question carefully and answer appropriately.

1. Why do you hate yourself?
   _____ 55 mph _____ all of the above
   _____ purple
7. The Mideast Peace Treaty was signed last month marking a major stepping stone in the quest for an end to the troubles that have plagued the countries for the past quarter century. Now, what would you do next?
   _____ punt _____ buy a nice dress _____ bunt _____ pull the goalie
3. Do you feel life has treated you badly and there seems to be no sense in living anymore?
   _____ this is a recording _____ hi there _____ only on waterbeds

Please submit the completed survey to The Pervertor's office in the back alley behind the offices of the Fort Whyte Opera. All answers will be tabulated and subsequently used to line bird cages. Your help is deeply appreciated (though not at all understandable).

George Spleen

by Bob Armstrong

"The Trudeau government has been a strain on the fabric of society. During wage and price controls, the working man sweated and toiled away only to have a wage roll-on take his money away. Canadians are in the pits of despair" said George Spleen, leader of the newly formed Right Guard party. "Our aim is to get the stink out of government."

Spleen, 112, was at Red River last Friday on his cross-Canada tour promoting his party for next Spring's election. He formed his party, the Right Guard, after both the Regressive Confusative and Anti-social Creditor parties kicked him out for "leaning too far to the right."

In his speech, Spleen attacked the Manitoba government as well as the feds, saying "People are saying that Sterling Lyon has put government back 20 years, we believe we can do six times as good."

Spleen, who is multilingual, speaking English as well as several barnyard languages, urged voters to tell Ottawa to stop "forcing our children to learn French in schools" and added "when we were youngsters, if we wanted to learn French we would go down to Madame Fifi's with five dollars."

The large crowd, many of whom arrived by mistake thinking a group of midget mimes was to be performing, responded with a variety of obscene noises and gestures.

After the speech, Mr. Spleen found time in his busy schedule to grant The Pervertor an exclusive interview.

Pervertor: On behalf of Red River and the Pervertor, I'd like to thank you very much for finding time in your busy schedule to talk to us.

George Spleen: You're welcome, I'm not really that busy today, I've got an interview for Better Home and Worm Breeder Magazine at two, but nothing before that.

P: Mr. Spleen, you are the leader of a brand new party and the Canadian people know nothing about you, furthermore you aren't even running enouth candidates to make a cabinet, let alone a government, what, then, are you trying to prove?

S: I believe the support for our kind of party is out there or I wouldn't be running, the problem is that very few people are willing to stand up in public and say the things I say.

P: Speaking of the things you said, what did you mean when you called John Diefenbaker "a dangerous young subsersive?"

S: I never said that, the exact quote was "dangerous young punk."

P: Leaving that issue aside, I think the Canadian people would like to hear something about your party platform. How do you feel about unions?

S: I never eat them except for on hamburgers.

P: No, I mean how do you feel about organized labour?

S: Don't know nothing about it, but if women want to try it, maybe it will help.

P: On the subject of national unity, how do you feel about keeping Quebec in Canada, is it necessary?

S: You're damn right, otherwise the Bruins and the Flyers will be taking the Stanley Cup.

P: Mr. Spleen, you have come out strongly against communism many times, what then is your opinion of keeping diplomatic ties with Red China?

S: The Red Chinese aren't all that bad, look what a job they did on those goddamn Bhuddists.

P: Mr. Spleen, it seems to me that what the voters want to know is if, at 112 years old, you are not too old to hold public office.

S: Cream and sugar, please.

P: Pardon?

S: The Kaiser! The Kaiser! Over the top men!

P: Mr. Spleen, are you all right?

S: General Wolfe! Hang Riel! Women and children first! Bilingual today, French tomorrow!

With the next federal election looming ominously on the horizon, the Liberals are suddenly facing competition from a group they didn't know existed. Under the calm and sturdy leadership of George Spleen, the Right Guard may be the party to bring back to Canada the sweet smell of prosperity.

I Don't Mean to Bitch, but

by Gary McGibney

I don't mean to bitch but why does the Hayner always wait until the last — word deleted — minuted to ask me to write something for the college paper.

Originally he wanted me to do an in-depth interview with Entertainment Editor Glen Dawkins (of "Dawkinstein Must Be Destroyed" fame) but Glen refused to talk to me because I'm not a member of the Rick Groom fan club (when was the last time he gained over a thousand yards?). Then he (meaning Dave H.) suggested I do a piece on Bob Liss but Bashful Bob was off to Flin Flon on a sabbatical to study Black Mysticism, see his folks and work on his earth farm.

So I decided to hell with all that nonsense and I would talk about something dear to my heart. Cheap wines. But Brian (Killer) Kozak said that was his department even if he was on strike. Koze even went so far as to accuse me of scabbing if I wrote the article. I told him to go suck a rock and then decided he was right.

At this point college leader Ken Sitter (he's the guy who tells the administration where to go AND how to get there) suggested this would be the perfect opportunity for the Cre-Comm Clan to challenge the first-year girls to a volleyball game. I told him this was a newspaper not a bulletin board and besides they didn't have the guts to play us anyway.

About this time Kathe Switzer walked into the office for the first time in weeks and suggested I remind everyone of the upcoming "Beer and Skits" night which just happens to be the most fun social ol' RRCC puts on every year. She said I should encourage everyone to enter a skit and remind them that there are cash prizes involved. "Should I do a story on beer and skits then?", I asked the Hayner.

"Better forget it McGib. Cre-Comm gonna sweep all the awards this year so there's no sense in anyone else even bothering to come out . . . but you might do another story on all those girls in nursing who go around pinching boys on the bum." I told him to go stick that idea in his ear as we'd be bound to get a mountain of mail from snotty-nosed spinsters and pro-feminist types who have nothing better to do than bitch about sexist articles in newspapers.

"Surely there must be something I can write about!" I screamed to no one in particular. I glanced anxiously about The Projector office hoping desperately that someone would come up with an idea I could follow up on.

Nothing. Well that tore it. There was absolutely nothing worthwhile to write about. I was a beaten man.

The managing editor, seeing my sobbing hulk, came over to console me and upon hearing my story told me not to worry about it. "After all, he concluded, "we never print anything worthwhile anyway and even if we did, who would read it."

I felt reborn. Armed with the knowledge that I could stoop to any lengths to get a story I prepared once more to stalk the halls with pen and pencil.

As if on cue College President Tony Militano strolled into the office in a rubber dress . . . All right! Now here's a story . . .

Comment
The truth about cutbacks . . .

by Susan Mihaychuk

Provincial government restraints have got a few people up in the air, but the Student Association isn't about to give up the gun.

"We're letting the government know what has happened at RRCC because of last year's cutbacks," announced S.A. President, Tony Militano before attending last Friday's meeting with Education Minister, Keith Cosens.

Outlining the main purposes of the meeting, Militano mentioned four areas in the college that have obviously suffered from the effects of cutbacks:
— the Learning Resources Centre
— RRCC's scramble parking area
— the RRCC physical education department
— the supplementary assistance fund (emergency loan fund).

RRCC students in Learning Resources Centre — "cutbacks and more cutbacks".

Last year, the Learning Resources Centre's (LRC) working budget was in the area of $136,000. It is now operating on $128,000.

Hardest hit in the LRC is the audio-visual department and the number of course-related books.

"They're understaffed in different sections of the library," informed Militano citing the example of the audio-visual department which went without a supervisor for almost a year.

On August 1 this year, the head librarian made a request for part-time help during the day — the position wasn't approved until October 11. Another example occured when one LRC staff member gave two month's notice before leaving her position August 4. That position won't be filled until November 6.

Meanwhile, with circulation up 25 per cent compared to September last year, the LRC is behind in filing, inventory is behind in the audio-visual area and the reference service finds it difficult to provide students with the service they'd like to give them, due to the limited number of staff.

As for student's scramble parking at the college, "the complaints continue every year", according to Militano.

So far, the S.A. has budgeted over $15,000 for sports including their 25 per cent inter-varsity subsidy. They've also added a $2,000 grant to cover costs of exhibition trips and travelling expenses for out-of-town tournaments. If the S.A. raised their budget to 40 per cent from 35 per cent to help cover costs, the government would put in 60 per cent instead of the presently allocated 65 per cent.

Originally, money was allocated in this year's budget for repair of the lots "but it was cut at the last minute."

"Students pay nine dollars a year for parking spots regardless of what the lot looks like," Militano explained, adding that "everytime it rains heavily or during a spring thaw, the whole area turns into a mudhole."

Maintenance crews at the college have been called out after heavy rains to level out the lots after they have dried but "in the long run I don't know if they're saving money or not," Militano commented.

Things don't look much better for the college's phys-ed department. With no increases in their annual budget and continuing inflationary rises, "they've actually taken an eight per cent decrease," Militano stated.

In view of such dismal funding the only inter-college competition RRCC participates in (4-West Championships) seems far-off. The games will be held in Vancouver early in March and before that date the phys-ed department will have to come up with support money to the tune of $22,000.

With no money in the budget at the beginning of the year, the department approached the government for assistance. Education minister, Keith Cosens, suggested that RRCC commit themselves to 4-West regardless of the zero budget.

Because the phys-ed department isn't getting an increase they'll have to come up with the $22,000 for 4-West within the college and that will mean making cutbacks elsewhere in the college, Militano mentioned.

Finally there's the student's emergency loan fund which was formerly government-funded. Originally set for $6000, the fund was cut out completely and this year was organized by the college.

With the S.A.'s budget of $1,000 for the fund and supervisor of Student Services, Diane Tyler helping out, the fund is now up to $4,000. That doesn't justify the government's cutback, however.

'Nothing ventured, nothing gained', is a good motto for RRCC's S.A.

Restraints are hitting hard everywhere and a lot of us will probably agree with Militan's direct viewpoint — "we don't like them."

Hallow's Eve Special:
Yes, there really are witches

by Maureen Treichel

I bet that a lot of you didn't even know they existed, although you probably see some almost every day. You may see some in the hallways, or perhaps you even sat beside one on the bus this morning. It's witches I'm talking about — witches and wizards.

The word "witch" actually means "wisewoman" and comes from the Anglo-Saxon word "wicca" which literally means "A magician who weakens the power of evil." This fact is contrary to most people's belief that witches are dark, evil creatures that spend all their time dabbling in black magic, brewing magical potions, and when the work load gets too heavy, go out for a quick job around the block on their broomstick. There is a group known as Devil Worshippers or Satanists who are associated with the latter activities, excluding the bit about the brooms. Black witches and warlocks are considered to be evil creatures while witches and wizards are said to work against evil.

Witchcraft, which is believed by some to be the first religion, was ancient at the birth of Christ. It is said to have been started by women, who, while carrying out their routine chores, began turning their minds to metaphysical thoughts. They marveled at the existence of the sun and moon, and at the great mysteries of birth and death. They concluded that there must be super beings looking after the world, beings such as the "Great Mother" — the goddess of fertility.

The Romans were great dabblers in Witchcraft. For example, Constantine V was known to employ people in the raising of the dead, while Augustus often got an occultist to interpret his dreams.

The world-famous Stonehenge in Britain is believed to have been used by the Druids, an ancient ancestral branch of the "Craft" — which is what today's witches call their religion.

The name Matthew Hopkins will strike fear in the heart of any witch. Hopkins, an unsuccessful English lawyer who became a self-appointed witch hunter in 1645, used for his text in condemning witches James I's book entitled Demonology. Matthew Hopkins sent more mumbling little old ladies to the gallows than did anyone else in England.

Since the birth of the "Craft" thousands of years went by before being a witch was no longer considered to be a crime. In 1736, James II repealed the portion of the Witchcraft Act which made the practise of witchcraft a crime, but it wasn't until 1951 that the Witchcraft Act was completely repealed, thereby removing all possibilities of prosecution for the practise of the wicca religion.

Witches have certain practises and beliefs that have been carefully guarded throughout the centuries. They are strong believers in life after death and in reincarnation. Each member has a hand written copy of The Book of Shadows — the equivalent of the Christian Bible. No one is allowed to read or make a copy of The Book of Shadows until after being initiated into the Craft by a witch-priest, who is the head of the congregation. The initiation, which involves a series of ritual dancing, and welcoming of the new member, is a very important matter in any witch's circle.

Witches still carry on the ancient tradition of having four major celebrations a year, during which they celebrate the fertility of their fields, rivers, livestock and women. The events are held at the times of the four seasonal changes. "May Eve" is held to welcome the coming of spring. They call their summer celebration "Lammua", their autumn one "Halloween" or "All Hallow's Eve" and "Candlemas" represents their winter festivities.

If you happen to discover sometime that your next-door neighbour is a witch, ask him to tell you the real reason for Germany's losing the Second World War. He'll probably say that it was because the "wicca" people sent evil thoughts out against Hitler. Numerous covens were known to hold meetings where they would all concentrate on Hitler's losing the war.

In Britain today, there are over 10,000 known witches who are members of covens. There is a large number of witches to be found all over the United States and Canada as well.

Yes, Virginia, there really are witches!

Student Manpower
Training Allowance Cuts Hit RRCC

by T. Regan

The federal government's new policy of "restraint", regardless of the consequences, took a dramatic new turn recently with the announcement of substantial cuts to manpower retraining allowances.

According to Treasury Board officials, the monies allocated for training allowances will be reduced by about $39.3 million. The funds budgeted for training programs will also be cutback by about $18.2 million.

The changes for students entering Red River after Oct. 2nd are as follows:
(1) Allowances given to trainees who are married to, or living with, an employed person will be cutback from $45 a week to $10 a week.
(2) Allowances given to single trainees, living alone, will be reduced from $79 a week to $60 a week.
(3) Allowances given to trainees with one dependent will be reduced from $90 a week to $80 a week.
(4) Allowances given to trainees with two dependents will be reduced from $97 a week to $95 a week.

In an attempt to partially compensate for these decreases the following paltry increases were also announced.
(5) Allowances given to trainees j ith three dependents will be increased from $103 a week to $110 a week.
(6) Allowances given to trainees with four or more dependents will be increased from $109 a week to $125 a week.

The number of people who will be affected by these cuts at Red River are about 30% of the students enrolled in the trade secion and approximately 50% of those enrolled in the Basic Training and Skills Development and Adult Basic Education programs.

Most affected by these cuts will be people who haven't been able to find a job and are coming to Red River to receive either upgrading or training so that they can enter the work force with work related skills.

Cullens proposed changes in Unemployment Insurance benefits from 66% of what a person made on their last job to 60%, up to a limit of $160 a week, will also drastically affect future students of Red River.

In the coming weeks students will meet to formulate plans to oppose these attacks on Manpower students.

John Schillinger's Rebels' hockey team opened the season on a losing note but it certainly wasn't a disgrace.

The final score was 9-5 but it came at the hands of North End which is one of the two top teams in the league, along with Warroad.

Scoring for the Rebels were Don Penerowski, Randy Rumas, assistant captain Wayne Dickey, Larry Jocelyn and Barry Stevens all with one each. Bob Liss picked up 3 assists, Pernerowski had 2 and Wade Robillard, Frank Budd, Enzo Martone had one apiece.

Schillinger said North End tried to use intimidation and this caused them a lot of penalty minutes but added his team should be complimented for being as agressive at the end of the game as in the beginning.

John said he now has the forwards to make three good lines for good balance, but the "defence was weak and we're going to have to work on it."

JUST NOTES: Three goalies in camp meant one had to go and the unfortunate one was Glen Kirby. Schillinger said it was a "tough decision", as he had made some excellent saves in the game. (He shared the net-minding action with Doug Wiebe).

Rebels next games are Nov. 3 at St. Boniface (Bertrand Arena) at 7:30; at Charleswood (Eric Coy Arena) at 8:00 and Nov. 7 with Charleswood at Red River (Old Ex. Arena) at 8:30.

Phys. Ed. Notes

by Tony Mariani

Curling and badminton tryouts are still in progress. The prospects look good and both events should be starting in about three weeks.

• • •

Intramaural t-shirts are now available in front of the Buffalo place and the Cave instead of the north gym. More mediums have been received and anyone who ordered one should pick it up now.

• • •

Floor hockey tournament will take place two weeks before Christmas. Men and women wishing to participate should start getting their teams together.

Any challenge games will take place after trimester exams provided that you contact June Graham a couple of days in advance. She will then provide a court and referree.

Challenge games are for anyone throughout the College (students and staff) in any athletic activities. All proceeds go to any athletic activities. All proceeds go to the intramural's jock sock. These funds in turn go the Christmas cheerboard.

R.R.C.C. Volleyball

by Cathy Aronec

On November 3 and 4, RRCC will host a 16-team volleyball tournament with 8 men's and women's teams being entered.

Teams will be from the "AA" league in Winnipeg and also out of town including teams from Saskatchewan Technical Institute (STI) in Moosejaw; Wascana Institute of Applied Arts and Sciences in Regina and Assiniboine Community College.

Labatt's Brewery is donating awards for the tournament which will not be charging for admission.

The games start Friday from 6:15 to 9:15 p.m. and continue on Saturday at 9:00 a.m. with the finals at 7:00 p.m.

I hope to see everyone there.

Women's volleyball opened their season on a winning note, defeating Ling Realty 4 out of 5 games.

The women lost the first game 18-16 but won the next four 15-12, 15-11, 15-1 and 15-9.

The women play all their games at St. Boniface College on Monday nights at 8:00 or 9:30 p.m.

The men's volleyball team wasn't as fortunate, in their league opener winning only 2 out of 5 games at the hands of the "Volleyballers".

The scores were (Rebels' score first) 15-12, 4-15, 12-15, 15-11 and 12-15. Games are every Monday at 7:00 in the North Gym.

Come out and watch the games of both teams.

A Love Story of Sorts

Bill Redekip

The movie Madame Rosa, now playing at the Park Theatre, is a love story of sorts between two unlikely characters in near impossible circumstances. Director Moshe Mizrahi finds two lonely, unloved people who have been cast together by misfortune, and discovers in their lives some hope, a peculiar affection developing between them that seemingly should have little chance of existing. The movie, in general terms, is about universal love or the absence of it.

At last year's Academy Awards, Madame Rosa secured the award for Best Foreign Film and has in turn been heavily praised throughout the world. It has received many international accolades for director Mizrahi and leading actress, Simone Signoret. It is based on the French novel, La Vie Devant Soi (Life Before Him), a novel that is highly touted.

The story revolves around the relationship between an aging ex-prostitute named Madame Rosa, and the boy she raised from infancy, the 14-year-old Mohammed, or Momo. Rosa, a prostitute for over 30 years until her age forced her to retire, is forced to spend her remaining years earning an income by baby-sitting other prostitute's children. As she says, "I became a nany to the children of whores." But as she becomes older, her income dwindles as fewer children are left to her charge. On top of this, her health begins to fail her both physically and mentally. She grows senile.

Her senility causes her to be haunted by her memory of the Holocaust. As a Jew, she cannot forget its terror. She tries to live with that terror, but it increases in force the more she loses her grasp with reality. She keeps a shelter where she hides at night from an imagined Nazi purge. At one point, she become paralyzed with fear when she hears an ambulance siren, believing the Nazis have found her.

She is also dying, she finds, and no one cares but the young Momo. Of all the children under Rosa's care, Momo was her favourite. She fussed and worried over him, afraid that she would not be able to keep him from a life of crime. When she finds that Momo has pulled a con to raise money that they need desperately, she tears it up in front of him. For 14 years she did what she could to raise him and provide him affection. While she is dying, it becomes Momo's turn to repay the favor.

Momo is both an Arab and parentless and he resents the fact. To be an Arab in French society is to be of a lower station and he is constantly reminded of it. But to be parentless meant a great deal more to him. His parents abandoned him at birth and Momo had always felt shunted and unloved as a result. He yearned to have parents like all the other children. He knew this made him different, an outcast. He was not like the other children. And he resented being raised by Madame Rosa. He wanted his real mother. He wanted his father.

When he does learn what happened to his parents, however, he no longer cares. With Rosa, he discovers something. He discovers a tenderness, a love for her, and her need for love as well as his.

If the movie has a flaw it lies in its pace. The movie develops too slowly and often too subtly. It does not hold the audience as well as it might and furthermore, it does not prepare its viewers for the ending, which is strong but almost shocking. The ending is powerful but the build up to it is too suble and one begins wondering after the movie if they had missed something. Sometimes the movie does not reveal enough about its characters to prepare us for the ending and sometimes it does not give us enough drama to hold our interest when invariably it could have.

The movie is, however, superbly acted. Simone Signoret won a Cesar (French Oscar) for her role as the heroine Rosa and she is deserving of it. She instills in Rosa the worldliness that goes with being a whore as well as a self-respect that stands above others' opinion of her. Rosa has pride in what she has done, in being beautiful once, of having many customers once. Signoret gives her a courage as well to accept her life for what it has been and she bears her burdens without complaining.

Above all, Signoret makes us forget that Rosa is a prostitute and makes her human. We see a poor aged woman, dying, but dying with courage and pride. We see her passion to go on living waver at times but never completely fail. And we see her compassion for others, a weary sighing compassion that has seen more than its share of life, not yet exhausted. Yet director Mizrahi does not try to extract sympathy from the audience/for her. The camera portrays her objectively.

Samy Ben Youb as Momo is also effective in his role. He gives Momo his dark brooding eyes that conceal Momo's strong emotion. Youb has the ability to make the look in his eyes speak louder than his actions. At the same time, Youb gives Momo the appearance of a boy who has grown up early.

IN supporting roles, Claude Dauphin plays Rosa's charming doctor and is fun to watch. Michal Bat Adam also makes an appearance as a film editor who befriends Momo.

Direction and all technical departments are done simply but well. The movie uses a vignette form in which the story moves in a series of short scenes. After each scene there is a brief blackout before it proceeds further. Similar methods are growing in popularity in today's movies.

Madame Rosa is a touching, skillfully made movie which deserves attention. In some ways it is an "artsy" type of movie, but in this case "artsy" does not mean that it is not entertaining. It is, although at times both funny and sad, while in parts, extremely moving.

The label "Foreign" can often hurt a movie at the box office but it shouldn't. A movie is considered foreign if it is made in a country other than the U.S. There are many such countries.

Madame Rosa, made in France, is dubbed in English.

Ron Paley: Alive and Kicking

by Rick Groom

Jazz was alive and kicking in RRCC's South Gym from 11 til 1 p.m., Tuesday, October 17th. Ron Paley's Big Band was centre stage and playing like there was no tomorrow.

Paley assembled an all-purpose, multi-talented 16-man orchestra and cut loose with some very mean sounds, indeed. After opening with a straight-ahead version of Sammy Nesticol's YOU'VE GOTTA TRY, the band seared into Herbie Hancock's CHAMELEON. As arranged by Jay Chattaway, the number displayed the gritty guitar of Tom Bartlette, a sultry saxophone solo by Merv Mauthe and the wicked keyboard work of Mr. Paley, himself. Next came Josef Zawinul's (of WEATHER REPORT) jumping, jubilant BIRDLAND which again featured Paley on electric piano as well as Tom Jestadt on drums.

Echoes of the Forties were hard to miss as Glenn Miller's classic IN THE MOOD demonstrated the Paley Band's versatility and professionalism. BOOGIE EXPRESS, another Sammy Nesticol tune, featured the first-class saxophone stylings of Jim Ruth while VEHICULAR MOTION gave way to the screaming trumpet of Frank "Stony" Burke and the ubiquitous flute section of Larry Crawford, Ken Fowler, Jim Ruth, Merv Mauthe and Pat Carey (who are all deadly saxophonists to boot).

After a short break, Chick Corea's LA FIESTA found Frank Burke pulling double duty on both trumpet and flugelhorn. Tom Bartlette's guitar was outstanding as was a driving drum solo by Tom Jestadt. Glenn Miller's nostalgic STRING OF PEARLS followed as did a shouting rendition of the Maynard Ferguson hit NICE AND JUICY. This well-named number showed off the towering trombone section of Rod Johnson, Mike Joyce, John Miller and Rick Swift with Paley's keyboards thrown in for good measure. And once again, Frank Burke topped it all off with a blazing trumpet solo.

The only original composition was AND TRY AGAIN by trombonist John Miller. This lush, smooth melody was faintly reminiscent of Stan Kenton's better material and not too surprisingly featured a husky trombone solo by the composer.

Carole King's CORAZON was given the full jazz treatment thanks to a pumping Woody Herman arrangement and a snarling wah-wah guitar solo by Tom Bartlette.

What would a jazz concert be without "The Blues"? The answer to that question came in the foot-stomping form of Phil Wilson's BASICALLY BLUES. Made popular by the legendary Count Basie, this chart let the trumpet section of Moe Romanoff, Wilf Jones and Frank Burke really shine. Bass guitarist Annis Kozub and drummer Tom Jestadt provided excellent back-up as did the magic fingers of Ron Paley.

The final number was MAGNETISM and featured the entire band. Easily the highlight of both one hour sets, MAGNETISM lived up to its title in every way except one. By the time the Paley Band had reached its last crescendo, nine-tenth's of the audience had left. But those who applauded to the end went away happy.

In short, Ron Paley's Big Band put on a damn, good show. They proved Winnipeg's jazz musicians can hold their own against all comers (as if there was any doubt).

Bit of Paradise on Portage

by Rick Groom

Italian food lovers of Winnipeg, rejoice! The Paradise Restaurant is just what you've been looking for.

Located at 789 Portage Avenue just across from Vimy Ridge Park, the Paradise Restaurant is owned and operated by Mike and Dina Rendina and has been in business since the first week of October. In other words, it's brand-new.

The menu features a wide variety of pizza, pasta and specialty dishes. Take-out orders are welcome and for orders over $5.00, there is free delivery within a three mile radius.

The Paradise is a licensed restaurant with a good selection of wines and spirits. Besides having a seating capacity of 100 in the dining room, the Paradise also has a cocktail lounge to accommodate 50.

Recommended dishes include Ravioli at $4.50, Spaghetti alla Matriciana at $4.50 (spaghetti covered in a sauce of bacon, onion and garlic and tomatoes), Lasagna alla Paesana (made with homemade pork sausage) at $6.50 and Coniglio alla Cacciatoria at $8.50 (rabbit cooked in a rich, Italian sauce and served with spaghetti and mushrooms).

Other items worth considering are Veal alla Valdostanna at $8.50 (veal and fried Italian ham served with a hard-boiled egg), Saltimbocca alla Romana ($8, pieces of veal served with boiled potato and covered with a special wine and assorted spices) at $8.50. For something a little different, there's Spaghetti alle Vongole at $4.25 (or spaghetti with baby clams) and Cannelloni con Ricotta at $4.50.

Pizza toppings include salami, bacon, shrimp, mushroom, olives, anchovies (of course), pineapple and Quattro Stagioni (or Four Seasons). On the average, a small pizza (nine inches in diameter) costs $2.50 to $2.75; a medium pizza (twelve inches) varies from $3.50 to $6.00 depending on the number of toppings; large pizza (fifteen inches) average from $5.00 to $8.00 while extra large pizzas (seventeen inches in diameter) run from $6.50 to $12.00.

The Paradise Restaurant should appeal to every struggling RRCC student not only for its modest prices, but for its excellent cuisine. Business hours are 11 a.m. to 1 a.m. from Monday to Thursday; 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays and from 4 p.m. to 12 a.m. on Sundays.

If you like Italian food, the Paradise Restaurant is your kind of restaurant.
