Campus Clubs

The Red River College Students' Association (RRCSA) offers the opportunity to all the active students to create new clubs and/or join already active clubs. Red River College Students' Association actively promotes and empowers students to develop student-led clubs that provide a safe space for our students and the Red River College community members, as well as supports their activities. Clubs are a great way to connect across various programs, meet new people and enhance student life experience at Red River College. The Students' Association recognizes two (2) types of student-led clubs that are open to full-time Red River College students. The two types of student-led clubs are: (i) Student-based Clubs, and (ii) Student-based Associations.

The Red River College Students' Association can help you find an existing club or assist individuals to start their own. Clubs typically are located at their respective campuses.

Club Types

1. Student-Based Clubs:

The Red River College Students' Association has student-based clubs in two (2) sub-categories. The two sub-categories are: (i) Interest Clubs, and (ii) Academic Clubs.

a. Interest Clubs:

These clubs consists a group of students that have similar interests and/or a group of students who wish to pursue similar activities. These clubs are based around extra-curriculum activities.

b. Academic Clubs:

These clubs consists a group of students with common academic interest who are facilitated by an instructor or class, whose membership continues beyond a set period of time, and whose activities are course related. Fundraising for Graduation falls under this category.

2. Student-Based Association:

The Red River College Students' Association allows students to form their own student-based associations. These associations will work under the guidance and policies of the Red River College Students' Association. These are student-led associations must follow the ratifications and guidelines outlined by the RRCSA. They can advocate for, represent, and serve students enrolled in a specific faculty or RRC school. The RRCSA does not acknowledge specific class or program associations. Student-based association policies and bylaws must not contradict any RRCSA policies or bylaws and must be reviewed and approved by the RRCSA. These student-based associations are administered and governed by their own membership and may have their own constitutions. However, RRCSA oversees them and their finances. Student based associations must have their own executives that oversee and run their respective associations.

If you are a student outlined in the association membership, you have the ability to vote in the elections for these associations without discrimination. The RRCSA may oversee, operate, and run any student-based association elections.
